SIUE to reopen Head Start classes on Feb. 6

After being closed nearly two months, the Head Start preschool program will reopen Monday, Feb. 6, at 8 a.m. under the sponsorship of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

Barbara Teters, vice present and provost of SUIE, said the delay in the program did not cause the staff or program to break up. Aspokesman for her office said Head Start will open in the same centers and use the same teachers as before the program ceased Dec. 8. "There will be no changes in the program," the spokesman said Friday.

the spokesman said Friday.

HEAD STÄRT formerly was administered by the Madison County Economic Opportunity Commission (EOC), which halted all programs when an audit by the Illinois Department of the Commission of Commissi Affairs (DCCA) discovered nearly $1 million in "questionable expenditures" by the agency. The Bank of Alton then froze the EOC bank accounts for non-payment of a loan and the EOC was forced out of its Alton office for failure to pay the rent.

A probe of the agency is underway by DCCA, the Federal Bureau of In-vestigation and the Illinois State

Police Division of Criminal Investigation

The U.S. Department of Health & Human Services, which provides grants to operate Head Start. selected SIUE Jan. 9 as the interim agency to administer Head Start, at least until July. SIUE also ad-ministers St. Clair County's Head Start program.

SIUE PLANS to continue the same program and double sessions used before Head Start closed. Food service will be provided by available vendors and resources. Transportation to the various centers will be provided, as in the past.

Prior to children returning to the classroom, parentescher conference are belieged.

MARGE: just another study?

It came as no big surprise that, after spending an estimated $5 million in studies, the Metropolitan Area Rail Gateway Enterprise (MARGE) will die July I.

MARGE was a $600 million rail modernization plan to consolidate scattered rail yards and speed rail traffic through the St. Louis area. Enlarging and improving the Madison yard was a major part of the plan.

There was one fatal flow and a state of the plan.

There was one fatal flaw all along — money. Fancy government schemes to help the railroads afford the improvements still would lead to huge debts held by the railroads. Although the railroads have turned to corner to profitability, they are understandably reluctant to take on huge new debts.

Instead, the railroads streamlined themselves. Mergers, new rail routings, fewer bottlenecks and fewer rail cars greatly reduced the hours it takes to get a rail car through St. Louis. Suddenly, things were running so smoothly, MARGE was not needed.

The railroads did it themselves, without government help. There should be a lesson there. We questioned all along such MARGE studies as the one that looked at the quad-City area and determined that where we needed an overpass most was on Mary ville Road at Route would have shown the majority believe the next overpass should be one Route 162 by East 23rd St. We are not sure we can afford all these studies. Look at the Hillside Drainage project which has been studied for decades, at an enormous cost. Not have the control of the control of the cost of the control of the cost of the cost of the ground either, unless there is great public support.

system. We doubt that will get off the ground either, unless there is great public support.
Lest we cast too great a dark shadow over MARGE, it has accomplished some good things. It has given the region a comprehensive plan for progress and has removed some rail lines from the East St. Louis riverfront. MARGE may crop up again, but is bound to be dornant for a while

Tax that really was temporary

Guest comment by Governor James R. Thompson—We will run Illinois within the means given to us by its people. Some may disagree and say we need more money, but the fact is that a permanent income tax increase was rejected by the General Assembly last year.

Legislators were reflecting the model the people

Assembly last year. Legislators were reflecting the mood of the people when they said "no." The one-year tax increase was necessary, but extension of that increase is not. We can live with what we have. Traditionally in America when a temporary tax is enacted, people say. "Baloney, Thai's politician talk. There's no such thing as a temporary tax."

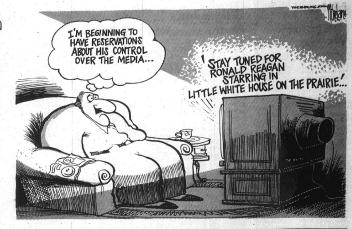

Usually, they are right. But our temporary in-tome tax increase is exactly that—temporary. It come tax increase is exactly that—temporary, it will be gone on July J.

We will offer the most efficient and compassionate services possible within our resources. That's what Illinoisans want and are going to get. The people have spoken about taxes, and we listened to what they had to say. Talk of an extension should end now.

There are signs that our state is beginning to recover and will continue to do so in the 1984-85 fiscal year as the national economy also rebounds. Unemployment is declining in Illinois and the United States, the number of jobs has increased, and inflation is holding steady at a low level.

Last year's tax increase proposal was based not ur years of recession that had underful services and our ability to present a state services in that had underful services is the services in the services

Traffic safety improved again

Across the nation, the good news in traffic safety at the start of 1984 is that fewer motorists are being killed in accidents. In fact, it appears that final statistics will show 1983 to have set an all-time low traffic death rate in terms of vehicle miles driven.

Illinois can be proud that It is all byte best at police shows that traffic deaths declined for the sixth straight year to a total of 1,537, the lowest level since World War II.

No one, of course, can be completely satisfied with that total, because far too many people still are losing their lives on our streets and highways, an estimated 43,500 on the national level last year. Cortumber of the street of 13,000 from the peak year of 1972 when 56,278 died. In another example, the death rate per 100 million vehicle miles driven was 6.97 in 1983. Last year it dropped to 2.63, the lowest ever.

Credit for this welcome development in Illinois and across the nation goes to many sources: The enactment of the 55-mph speed limit in 1974, new drunken driving and child restraint laws, and stricter traffic enforcement. But also worthy of commendation are the thousands of motorists who have become more conscious of the need for safer driving.

Yet, we cannot rest on our laurels. When 1,500 lives are saufted out on state roads, that is too many. When one-third of the motorists exceed the 55-mph speed limit, that is unacceptable. And, as the traffic safety job is not over.
With even more emphasis on education and enforcement, we should be able to further reduce traffic fatalities. That must be the goal all of us have whenever we get behind the wheel.

Man finds unemployment hard on his family

To the Editor, I have heard on the radio, televi-sion stations and even read in my sion stations and even read in my local paper that unemployment is dropping in our locality. The last week of my unemployment benefits ran out, I was told in a letter to report to the unemployment office. While I was there, two men in front while I was there, two men in first. While I was there, two men in first. When my turn came, I was told mine were exhausted and I was not eligible for extension. This is probably the reason that unemployment is down. This was not brought all on by my government, it is part my fault. I ran for an office in my local painters' union. I wanted to help myself and my fellow men. End of a very sad chapter

It was 117 years ago that Congress, in a burst of anti-Catholic setiment, triggered by Catholic im-ingration from Europe, ended diplomatic relations with the vatican by refusing to budget funds for the purpose of maintaining an embassy.

The main significance of President Reagan's decision to restore full diplomatic relations with the Holy See is that Congress will probably agree, finally closing the book on an unhappy chapter of nativism and bigotry.

Parents have equal custody rights

As previously noted, the custody of a minor child in Illinois is determined by the courts based on the child's best interest. Theoretically, the parents start on an equal footing and the father has just as good a chance to win custody as does the mother. In some states, such as Florida, the father, in order to win custody, would have to prove that the following the court of the c court had to decide which parent should be awarded custody.

The child was interviewed in the judge's chambers and she expressed a desire to stay in this country and not return to Italy. She also stated that she got along very well with the two children of her stepmother and would enjoy living with them on stegular basis. The state of the st mother's testimony which indicated that she would be working five days a week and had no babysitting neighbors testified that, although the mother had a good relationship with the child, the father's relationship was exceptional.

The court in this case awarded custody to the father. The mother appealed the case, but the Appellate Court upheld the decision of the trial court. The court noted that, in this case, the father offered did the mother.

The mother claimed that the trial court did not give sufficient consideration to the "adulterous relationship" of the father and stepmother to which the child was sugjected prior to the father's remarriage. The court stated that the father may have acted imprudently when he lived with the child and Nevertheless, the court felt that the father did not engage in any conduct which had an adverse effect on the child.

SURVEY INCLUDES
ECONOMIC WELL-BEING
Beginning Feb. 1, local representatives of the U. S. Bureau of the Census will visit selected households in the area to conduct the Survey of Income and Program Participation, Marvin L. Regional Office in Kansas City, announced today.

This survey is being conducted in response to the need for better information on the economic well-being of the U. S. population. Information collected will be used to determine how selected government programs are working and to help policy makers consider what changes are needed to make programs more effective.
